THE AIR OF MOUNTAIN AND SEA IN YOUR OWN HOME

YOU can enjoy the air of the Mountains and the Sea in your own home by means of the B.E.L. Atmosan Ozone Generator. The Health-giving atmosphere of high altitudes and salubrious districts can be introduced and maintained permanently by means of this proved system of Ozone Generation. Ozone may be best described as a concentrated form of Oxygen, in fact, it has a weight 50% heavier than the same volume of Oxygen.

It is a very powerful oxidiser and deodorant, and even a small proportion of this gas mixed with the air in a room has strongly disinfectant properties.

THE ATMOSAN SYSTEM IS A SAFE HOME REMEDY FOR:

Coughs Sore Throats Bronchitis Influenza Pneumonia Rheumatism

and some form of Deafness, and has been used with conspicuous success in all stages of TUBERCULOSIS.

In addition, GANGRENE, SKIN DISEASES and SEPTIC CONDITIONS can be permanently eradicated in an amazingly short time.

The cost of current, whether for curative or domestic use, is almost negligible; the "Atmosan" Generator consumes only 1/50th part of a unit per hour, and produces sufficient Ozone to treat the air of a room of 3,000 cub. ft.

Her Majesty Queen Mary graciously accepted an "Atmosan" Ozone Generator for personal use.

Demonstrations can be arranged at our London showrooms, or full particulars and literature will be gladly sent on request.

NOTES FROM MAIDSTONESPRING PLANTING

We find it necessary to combat the idea that if planting is not done before Christmas it is best to defer it until the following autumn. Science and practice are at one in agreeing that unless very early planting is done any time during the winter is equally good.

Roses, Fruit Trees, Herbaceous and Alpine Plants can be dispatched immediately. Catalogues on request.

THANKS to its partly-folding roof, the landaulette, while conceding little in appearance to the fixed roof limousine, permits one to open the car to the air whenever it is pleasant to do so. This feature renders the landaulette a favourite form of motor carriage. The 'Warwick' three-quarter landaulette is beautifully constructed and finished, its quality being the best. It is nevertheless considered by trade experts to be as inexpensive a motor carriage of its superior kind as can anywhere be found. The engine is the smoothly powerful 23-60 h.p. Vauxhall overhead-valve engine, fitted with the Lanchester harmonic balancer, a device which by neutralising vibration prevents body-drumming.

Both in elegance of coachwork and refined functioning of engine and transmission the 'Warwick' accords with the highest ideals of users of best-class cars. Beyond this it has the distinctiveness of uniting the good points of two schools of design.

B.S.A*

IT is an undoubted fact that the B.S.A. is the most popular Shot Gun among all classes of Sportsmen to-day. The reason?—the fact that it has been designed, very successfully, to meet a general need for a really high-grade powerful shot gun at a moderate price.

All the essentials of a good shot gun are combined in a B.S.A.—strength, with lightness and perfect balance, ensuring easy handling at all times; crisp, clean trigger pulls for quick snap shooting; graceful lines; and wonderful patterns and penetration.

A finer value-for-money gun it is impossible to obtain.

All parts are interchangeable and every gun is fully guaranteed.

6 features that make DUNLOP the finest CORD TYRE in the world

CORD TYRES are made in beaded-edge and straight-side types for the equipment of all cars, British and foreign.

1. The Dunlop method of multiple-ply Cord construction reduces internal friction and prolongs the life of the tyre.
2. The exceptional quantity of toughened rubber on the tread, combined with the disposition of the material, make for greater durability and less possibility of puncture.
3. The Dunlop Cord tread provides ample security against skidding; and, unlike other tyres, its grip on the road improves with wear.
4. The Dunlop Cord tread and casing are admirably "balanced" so that the whole tyre wears uniformly.
5. The Dunlop Cord is silent and clean running.
6. It adds distinction to any car.

These features combine to make Dunlop Cords the longest-mileage and most economical tyres—and they are British-made in every detail.

Be sure your Tyres are British.

Fit Dunlop and be satisfied'

THE AUTOMOBILE WORLD.

FUEL AGAIN

MANY things are contributing to bring to the fore at this moment a problem that never fails to interest all sections of motorists—that of the fuel supply of the future and the probability of further increases in price. Recently the petrol companies came into the limelight as the result of their welcome change of front in the matter of roadside advertisements, though their pronouncements on this subject, while entirely commendable and welcome, seem to have received more attention and to have been credited with a greater importance than they deserve. True, every roadside sign that disfigures the landscape ought to be removed, but this publicity devoted to the petrol companies' actual or projected removal of their signs seems to have obscured the fact that taking the country as a whole the fuel companies are quite minor offenders. There is every reason for thinking that before this year is out practically every manufacturing or selling organisation that caters exclusively for road users will have ceased to use the road as a means of propaganda for their wares. But are these caterers of motoring the greatest offenders against good taste in advertising and against the possible amenities of the countryside? We have previously expressed the opinion that they are not, and there is as yet no indication that their excellent lead is to be followed by the vendors of pills and soaps who, if memory serves aright, were originally responsible for the erection of roadside advertisements.

But however important this matter may be for the country, one of much greater import for the nation is on the tapis. Great Britain, as we all know, is, owing to the refusal of its past Governments to foster a home-produced fuel industry, dependent on foreign countries for every gallon of oil or spirit consumed in its motor cars or battleships. Moreover, not only does all our spirit come from abroad; the greater part of it is produced under foreign supervision and by foreign labour and capital. We have not forgotten what this can mean in time of national stress, even though the foreign countries concerned are friendly to us; if they were unfriendly, where should we be?

As a very feeble effort towards tackling the least serious side of the problem the Government has for some time exercised control by right of majority of share holding in one of the importing companies—the Anglo-Persian—the motor spirit distributing section of which is known to motorists as the British Petroleum Company, Limited. For reasons that no ordinary man pretends to understand it has been suggested that the Government should dispose of its interest in this company to whomsoever cares to buy it. As was evidenced at the recent Scottish Show a certain proportion of the fuel produced under the control of the Anglo-Persian Company is entirely home-produced fuel, for there was on exhibit in the Kelvin Hall evidence of the work and activity of Scottish Oils, Limited, though it is feared that, owing to lack of Government encouragement, the shale oilfields from which Scottish petrol has long been obtained will soon have to be abandoned. Whether they are abandoned first or not matters little compared with the prospect of their being handed over, lock, stock and barrel, to the foreign interests that, should the Government decide to sell, will almost certainly secure control of the Anglo-Persian Company. The foreign element in such control may or may not be openly apparent, but there is every reason for thinking that it will be there.

The magnitude of the motor spirit business is far from being realised by the public. Until we had inspected the magnificent and huge installation recently opened by the British Petroleum Company, Limited, at Hackney Wick, and were told that it was but one of many such, our own ideas on the subject were of the vaguest. And this Hackney Wick plant, with its many acres of storage facilities and all the incidentals for the distribution of petrol to a large slice of London, is not merely one of several; all those together are merely a part of that much vaster organisation which is the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, supplying not merely fuel for the road transport of the land, but oil that is burnt—albeit extravagantly and unscientifically—in most of the largest ocean-going ships of to-day, including those battleships that used to be the chief defence of this country but are so no longer. We may keep our battleships and we may have our aeroplanes, but of what use would be either were our enemy one who controlled the sources of fuel supply for both?

At this very moment there are rumours that the American controllers of the chief of the world's oilfields are preparing a campaign of soaring prices, against which this country will be able to hurl nothing but futile protests. At various times independent fuel-producing and marketing concerns have made efforts to enter the market and so keep it healthy by the tonic of competition; but it is surely ignorance of the true situation that alone explains the apathy of fuel users which has caused the ultimate failure of all these enterprises. As a mere principle of industry, Government interference in the commercial control of a great enterprise is not to be encouraged, but special circumstances require special treatment. And the recently announced discovery of huge oil-bearing shale deposits on the north coast of Somerset serves to give the whole subject a new and lively interest. If preliminary calculations by credible experts are substantiated, Somerset may well become the centre of a new industry of supreme national importance.

The Motor Legislation Committee, whose constituent bodies include the Automobile Association and Motor Union, and the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders, has passed the following resolution:

"That this Committee, representing the great majority of the users of motor vehicles and every section of the motor industry, protest against the contemplated sale by the Government of the nation's shares in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company on the following grounds:

"(1) That the retention of these shares is essential for the purpose of safeguarding liquid fuel supplies to the Navy, the Air Force, and motor transport, and maintaining adequate reserves of fuels in this country;

"(2) That any transaction by which Government control of the Anglo-Persian undertaking might be surrendered would be detrimental to British users of motor spirit, who regard the present arrangements as a safeguard against monopoly;

REMOVAL OF A SERIOUS DANGER SPOT.

The bottom of the hill between Chichester and Petworth was a highly dangerous point, for the gradient was steep, the bend sharp, and the road narrow round a blind corner. The road has now been widened (the car in the right hand picture is on the old edge of the road), and the corner made transparent, while a minor entering road has been widened also, so that it now acts as a "safety valve."

"TWO things strike one at once concerning the 10/15 h.p. Fiat Saloon" writes Mr. George Stead, Motoring Editor, "Sunday Times," Jan. 6, '24.

"Extreme Comfort-Very Low First Cost"

"I was particularly pleased to see how this sterling chassis dealt with a four-seater coach-built saloon body. Such a body is naturally heavier than one of touring pattern, but the extra weight caused no falling off in performance. In fact, the Fiat seemed to run better, the extra weight improving the springing and the general 'feel' of the car."

Problems of Distribution and Quality.

IT seems only a few months ago that we were reading glowing accounts of how the convenience of the American motorist was studied and met by the fuel pump installations and filling stations that are to be found on the highways across the "herring pond." Anybody who "wrote for the papers" would, on his return from the land of all that is wonderful, tell of how all his motoring troubles were overcome by the excellent service stations erected at the roadside apparently for his special benefit, so prompt and so efficient were the services rendered. Long after our own pioneer stations at Chiswick and at the bottom of Kingston Hill were working, and long after all but the smallest of garages were provided with their pumps, in obedience to the popular demand, the managing director of a big English motor firm told his guests at a banquet how, on his recent visit to the United States of America, he had been impressed with the filling station idea, as though none of his hearers had ever heard of a petrol pump or an A.A. filling station, although of those guests some 90 per cent. were proprietors of garages big enough to justify their appointment as sole agents of this unobservant—or should it be observant?—managing director.

It has been pointed out many times that the reason why petrol pumps have been comparatively slow in attaining popularity in this country is that they are illegal obstructions when not erected on private ground, and it will be remembered that the go-ahead town council of Folkestone last year sent out a band of midnight marauders to pull down all standing pumps, and then followed their action by an appeal to motorists not to stay away from this inviting resort.

It is now urged that many petrol pumps are inaccurate in the measures they dole out to the motorist, and that many more supply spirit of inferior quality. Are the accusations just? In many cases they certainly are, but it would be absurd to suggest that because some pumps go wrong, either accidentally or by design, in either the quality or the quantity, or both, of the fuel that they supply, that therefore all pumps are to be eschewed as swindling instruments. Paradoxically enough, an ordinary fuel pump is not a measuring instrument within the meaning of the Act—though its primary function is surely to measure—and it is therefore not subject to Government supervision. Anything that can escape the taint of Government interference in these days deserves encouragement—but within limits that are exceeded when advantage is taken of the immunity for the practice of dishonesty. If the pump is of the type that embodies a container that is graduated and into which the fuel passes so that its quantity may be seen by the motorist before it passes down to his tank, then it is a measuring instrument and so is liable to Government inspection. One inference to be drawn is, therefore, that a visible feed pump is better than any other type. But the inference is subject to qualification.

Whereas there is nothing to prevent any garage proprietor, or anyone else, from erecting a petrol pump on his ground and supplying the public from it, and whereas there are many such privately owned and maintained pumps all over the country, there is another kind of pump—or, rather, a pump run on different lines. These are those that are installed and maintained either by a "filling station" or by one of the big companies.

The filling station is generally able and willing to produce independent evidence that the measure given by its pumps is a slight excess in favour of the customer; the big company usually has its own inspector who ascertains periodically that the pump is working accurately and also that it is filled with only the spirit whose name it bears. Neither of these safeguards apply to the independently installed pump, and the user of it must take the risk of falling into the hands of an unscrupulous man.

But is there any ordinary means of measurement or standard of quality that does not open itself to abuse by the dishonest owner and dealer? True, the two-gallon petrol can is sealed by the distributing organisation and, when bought with the seal intact, may be regarded as containing nothing but branded spirit. But was not one of the very reasons that led to the coming of the pump the fact that the two-gallon can more often than not contained less than two gallons? Most of us at some time or another have bought a two-gallon can that, with an unbroken seal, contained less than two gallons of fuel, and any garage proprietor will tell how the majority of the cans that he "splits" are found to contain short measure, the loss of which he must make good. In discussing this problem with an acquaintance the other day, I was told that it is the regular practice of some pump operators to withdraw the spout from the car tank before the spirit has ceased to flow, to which my retort was that the buyer who cannot look after his own interests better than to allow such "diddling" needed not a motor car but a nurse and bath-chair as the instrument of his airings.

WHAT IS PETROL?

Not the least of the difficulties in ensuring that only spirit of satisfactory quality shall be supplied from the petrol pump is connected with the lack of a standard specification for motor spirit. It is almost universally forgotten or overlooked that "petrol" is a trade name for the products of one particular firm—Messrs. Carless, Capel and Leonard, who were among the first distributors of motor spirit in this country. Only their fuel may correctly be described as "petrol," and it is notable that none of the big companies of to-day so refer to their products. "Motor spirit" is presumably any spirit that may be used in a motor, and if a dealer chooses to dilute with paraffin the spirit that he receives from, say, the British Petroleum Company, who can accuse him of wrong-doing so long as he sells his fuel as "motor spirit" and not as "B.P." or any other recognised special name? After all, what are any of the ordinary motor fuels, other than benzol, but a paraffin—which is not the name of a single substance but of one of the great hydro-carbon series. Once upon a time only hexane (C_6H_{14}) and heptane (C_7H_{16}) would be accepted as fitting constituents of a motor spirit, and octane and nonane (C_8H_{18} and C_9H_{20}) were "paraffin"; to-day octane is perhaps the greatest single constituent of a "petrol" motor spirit, and lamp oil consists of higher members of the series than decane and duodecane ($C_{10}H_{22}$ and $C_{12}H_{26}$). Hence, incidentally, the greater safety of paraffin of to-day compared with that of fifteen years ago, because of its decreased volatility; the lower members of the paraffin series were once waste products for which no market could be found and which were extensively burnt as useless but dangerous substances; to-day they are the most sought after.

This difficulty of a standard specification of motor spirit is one that plays into the hands of the unscrupulous retailer, but it is not insuperable. Once some easily workable standard is set up the retail buyer may protect himself by taking only spirit that has been certified as satisfying the standard, just as at present he only buys potable spirits that are so certified—or, at least, are certified according to their inferiority below a given standard. The setting up of such a standard for motor spirit will by no means place into the hands of the big oil ring group, but will, on the other hand, assist considerably the efforts of competitive smaller companies which otherwise may easily be driven off the market. Given this method of proving their goods, the smaller companies may appeal to the private motorist with just as much confidence as may the big and better known groups, for they will be able to show just as clearly and convincingly the official hall-mark on their cans or pumps that their spirit is at least up to official requirements as to quality; while, given some similar guarantee that the pump up to which he draws has been certified "O.K.," the motorist may fill up, sure in his mind on the two vital scores of quality and quantity.

Of course, the fuel pump ought to be a measuring instrument, and in due course it is bound to become one; but until that time has arrived the purchaser may safeguard himself by patronising only those pumps that belong to filling stations that can and will, on demand, produce independent evidence of the accuracy of their pumps, and those that are hall-marked as being filled and controlled by one of the big distributing organisations, at least one of which already demands a signed guarantee from the owner of the pump that no one else shall add fuel to its storage tanks a guarantee that is readily enforceable if the key of the filling orifice be kept by the supplying company.

Considerable interest attaches to the recent successful prosecution by Messrs. Shell-Mex, Limited, of a garage proprietor who sold as Shell motor spirit which was not of this brand. Especially interesting is the fact that the fraudulent salesman employed not a pump but cans for his dishonest practice. He bought petrol cans, painted them red, and then filled them with some spirit that he bought in bulk, and sold the full cans as containing Shell. Obviously the cans were not sealed with the Shell seal, and if the motorist cares to take a can without verifying the seal on it which is placed there by the distributing company as guarantee of the contents—as regards quality—he has only himself to blame for what he gets. And yet not one motorist in a hundred takes the precaution of examining the seal of a can before it is broken. As regards quantity, the seal is of but secondary value, for while it may indicate that when it left the distributing centre the can was full, it cannot guarantee that there has been no loss by evaporation.

That Baffling Problem.

A REFERENCE to a baffling engine trouble and an invitation for readers to try their skill at diagnosis (in the issue dated January 12th), have aroused more interest than was anticipated. Several correspondents have made efforts at a solution and one or two technical men in the "shops" have ventured shots in the course of conversation, but all have fallen wide of the mark. Several would have that the seat of the trouble must lie in the timing gear which may have slipped temporarily and then caught on with spasmodic jerks. This is certainly a possible occurrence that often gives rise to symptoms somewhat similar to those described, but it is ruled out of court in this instance by the clearly stated fact that after attention in a garage where no definite mechanical adjustment or alteration was made to the engine, it resumed its former good behaviour and then failed again after an interval of a fortnight. Slipped timing could not possibly account for such symptoms as these; indeed, except for the actual cause of the trouble I can think of nothing but the simplest possible explanation of any, that would serve. This would be that the whole trouble was due to a partially choked carburettor jet; cleaning in the garage might well remove the obstruction of which more might find its way down to the critical point after an interval if there were a stock of it in the tank or even in the pipe line.

But it was not carburettor trouble—indeed, who has ever heard of an S.U. carburettor suffering from a choked jet for more than a few seconds—nor was it a seized piston, a trouble to which S.U.'s are heir and which may baffle the driver who does not know the instrument well. Before giving the explanation it may be as well to review the symptoms briefly.

The car was one that had been driven for some 3,000 miles without having given any trouble or symptom of incipient weakness whatever. And then when climbing a steep hill that normally it would have soared up on second gear, it began to missfire badly so was stopped. A hurried examination revealed nothing wrong, and a spark plug tester showed that all the plugs were firing. Immediately after the stoppage the engine started up again with a single swing of the handle, and the hill was finally climbed at very low speed and in a most half-hearted manner on bottom gear. A long descent following the climb seemed to indicate that the trouble, whatever it had been, had entirely disappeared, but after being left stationary for a couple of hours the engine, though willing to start quite easily, was running on one, two, three or four cylinders spasmodically, sometimes quite regularly on one pair, with variations among those which worked and those which did not.

On a resumption of the journey the trouble became worse and worse until the owner, as chronicled in the original note, turned into a Maidstone garage. But the car had never actually stopped or refused to climb a hill, and, indeed, on one very steep gradient of something like 1 in 4, where it had come to a standstill for sheer lack of power, it immediately afterwards made a standing start—which, of course, required greater power effort than the straight through climb. In the garage the mechanic did much as the owner had done, though under better conditions and more thoroughly. He examined plugs, valves, carburettor, induction system—for possible air leaks—and, finally, the magneto which, however, was not taken completely off the car. Distributor and contact breaker were cleaned and the points of the latter adjusted more accurately than they had been, and, of course, timing both of valves and magneto was carefully checked and found to be O.K. The firing in both carburettor and silencer, which had been one of the most noticeable faults in the running of the engine, suggested, of course, something wrong with valves or timing.

Now, after the mechanic had worked for two hours without doing anything—readers of the original note will remember that this is in no sense a reflection on his willingness or his skill, but simply indicates that to all intents and purposes he left things exactly as he found them—that engine ran as well as it had ever run! That certainly does not suggest that the mechanic had done nothing nor that his labours had been wasted—but wait for the sequel.

This came a fortnight later, when all the symptoms began to occur over again. This time the owner of the car was not caught on the road engaged in a long and hurried journey, but at home, and after consultation with his friends decided to take the car straight to the makers of its magneto. This instrument was removed without delay and examined by an expert in its intricacies and idiosyncrasies, who in less than twenty seconds after taking the machine off the engine had located the trouble—a faulty ball race! This was replaced by a new one and hey presto! everything has been right ever since!

The entirely inexperienced or the highest of the experts in such matters may wonder why such a fault was so long in its location and how it could baffle so many examiners who ought to have known better than be put off the track. Firstly, and of most importance, is the fact that the fault of the ball race was so small that it allowed of only very slight lateral play in the magneto spindle; when the contact breaker was examined in the ordinary way its points seemed to be opening and closing quite as they ought and, indeed, their failure to do so was only spasmodic. It so happened that when examined the armature chose to lie straight and stable, under which conditions the contact-breaker worked all right. The second point is that as there were no balls in the race actually broken there was none of that characteristic cracking and grinding noise which hall-marks a broken ball race to the veriest novice. Therefore, when the engine was turned, either by hand or by starter, there was not enough noise from the magneto to be noticeable. When, however, the instrument was removed from the engine and turned by hand by someone who knew all its harmonies and discords the fault at once became evident.

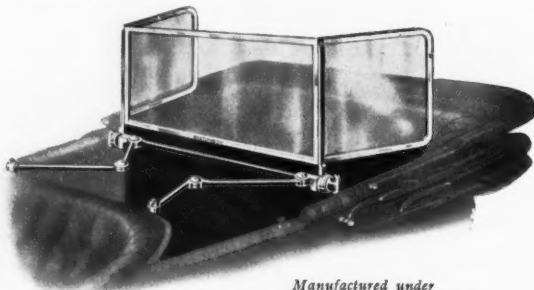

Readers may deduce what moral they will from this true story, and in conclusion I will say that I am on the tracks of another problem—also electrical—equally baffling. At present it has defeated many who thought they could put their fingers on the root of all such evils immediately, and if it continues to do so it shall be duly aired in these columns. At present it seems, I must confess, too absurd to deserve serious notice and it is expected to collapse at any moment. Whether it does so or not it may justify a reference either in the form of a problem or as a lesson in how one may sometimes be caught napping. J.

A Story of Satisfaction for EVERYMAN.

"WHY stint yourself the pleasure of motoring, when you can get a SINGER for £200? Somehow or other I always looked upon a car as beyond my pocket. I'm one of those sort of chaps that want a car if I have one, none of your 'apologies' for me; I would rather go without. But when I woke up to the fact that I could get a Four Seater SINGER for £210, and by deferred payments if I chose, I cut out the 'ifs' and embarked upon a larger life without limitations. My SINGER has proved an 'open sesame' to health and pleasure. Expensive? Not a bit of it! When four of us can do forty miles to the gallon, and get out every evening and week-end to just wherever we fancy, it's not an expense, my boy, it's an economy. My only regret is that I did not begin motoring with a SINGER before."

For the Cooler Months

IN the short space of a season, PRICE'S ZERO HUILE DE LUXE has become established as the finest oil for many types of four and six cylinder car engines. Numerous absolutely spontaneous testimonials have been received praising the high efficiency of this rich compound lubricant.

During the months of cool weather ZERO HUILE DE LUXE will prove particularly acceptable for many engines; its remarkable fluidity giving easy starting from cold. Yet it withstands the highest possible engine speeds for lengthy periods, and, moreover, is delightfully clean in working, being wholly free from any tendency to form gummy or carbonaceous deposits.

ZERO HUILE DE LUXE is entirely free from Castor Oil.

Zero Huile de Luxe

Owners of the following makes of cars will be interested to hear that, as a result of careful tests, in most cases either by the makers or their Agents, ZERO HUILE DE LUXE has been found excellent for each.

THE SECRET OF GOOD DRESSING ON A LIMITED INCOME

THAT this is becoming every day a more serious proposition is vouched for on every side; and those who are essaying real, not comparative, economy for the first time in their lives are very much inclined to flounder about in these—to them—unknown depths. It is no easy matter to readjust a set point of view, and it is Paris, of all places in the world, that is setting the pace in this economical campaign; not, of course, with her affluent moving population, from the Argentine and the States, who are as ready to spend as lavishly as ever; but with the elect among the well born there, who still remain, notwithstanding a Republican constitution, one of the most exclusive of coteries.

This secret of how to look well dressed at a moderate expenditure demands forethought, organisation, self-denial, and a carefully planned-out campaign for the entire year; anyway, with such essential features as a good coat and skirt, wrap-coat, and a wise discretion in the choice of furs. None of these should ever be bought merely with a view to meeting the needs of a single season. They must be of that representative, sound, non-committal order capable of lasting and looking well for two or more years.

Such really serious items written off, the next procedure is to work out how few afternoon and evening gowns will meet the probable social vicissitudes likely to occur; and, although that is, naturally, largely individual, it is always worth bearing in mind that detail and finish are far more important factors than the gown itself.

The former, too, exact more time than actual money, and are far more easily and economically planned if a main colour scheme is selected; while equally important is an immaculate freshness. Any garment soiled, creased or spotted, no matter how modish it is, invites and usually gets unpleasant criticism; in connection with which attention may be drawn to the many materials nowadays that wash, such as Georgette, silk marocain, crêpe de Chine, and even certain wool goods, so fashioned that they can be laundered at home. The terms of the latter-day cleaners and dyers, too, are very moderate and their service far more expeditious than it was of old.

Nor is there any economy in buying cheap materials: that, indeed, is one of the worst forms of extravagance, and equally so an indulgence in extravagantly patterned and coloured fabrics, that are merely a passing whim—a precaution particularly à propos just now, since there are many temptations.

A self-colour, however, is not nearly so liable to date, and can always be enlivened by clever touches of relief, which are easily changed. Nothing, perhaps, has accounted for the long run brown has had other than its splendid adaptability. Shoes, hosiery, gloves, etc., to tone are all available in this nuance; while there is always something arrestingly attractive in an alliance of brown and black, and it is one, curiously enough, that does not weary the eye. Greys come far behind browns in general adaptability; and, fortunately, just now black can do no wrong—anyway for day, although there is a falling off to be remarked in the favour bestowed on it where evening dress is concerned. When it is worn, moreover, there is a feeling for a more lustrous hue, the duller crêpes and marocains being reserved for colours.

"Learn to know thyself" is the first principle to be laid down by all those who desire to present a consistently well turned out appearance on a restricted allowance. In all of us there are possibilities to be developed and limitations to be disguised or got over; and if these are frankly faced and the courage of one's convictions firmly adhered to, the task is shorn of half its difficulties and pitfalls are avoided.

Such details as shoes, hosiery and gloves have not been touched upon, though these, again, if bought and handled skilfully, can be brought into line with the rest. Thus, with shoes, a pair of brown low-heel calf, a pair of black patent or French kid, both ankle-strap style for the street, a pair of black suède for the house, and for evening a pair of silver tissue and a pair of black satin, will be found a useful nucleus for the woman who lives in town.

Following up this short treatise on economical expenditure, our original pictured offering this week is a suggestion for a useful afternoon frock—the sort of stand-by no wardrobe should be allowed to lack. It is one, moreover, that conforms to the easy slip-on order so appreciated by the busy woman, with no fal-lals to get out of order, or extraneous touches liable to get soiled; and yet withal it is essentially of the moment, with the new circular skirt and perfectly straight corsage.

Fashioned of silk marocain, the full flare at the hem is really only apparent when the wearer moves, in such a soft material. And for sheer practical serviceableness there is nothing to surpass a black marocain, relieved by bands and sleeve insets of some Eastern-patterned and coloured embroidery, with which almost any hat, light wrap or summer-weight fur may be worn.

Some of the newest models of this type of little frock are arranged with high-collared throats that button down from the summit of the collar to half way down the front, rather after the manner of a Russian tunic. They are decidedly chic, though it is very questionable whether the majority will care for this covered throat.

For PRESENT WEAR

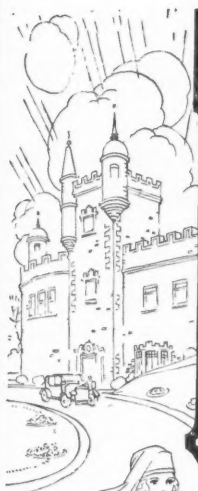

In order to keep our workers fully employed during the between seasons, we have produced several attractive knitted suits exclusive in design, and made from twisted artificial silk and wool of a suitable texture for present wear. The actual value of these garments is 7½ guineas and we shall sell them at the exceptional price of 94/6, until the present stock of yarn is used.

KNITTED SUIT (as sketch) made from a mixture of artificial silk and wool in speckled colours, with pattern in knitting at hem of coat and skirt, and also on collar and cuffs of coat. A practical suit in a texture suitable for present wear, in many good speckled effects. This style is particularly becoming to small ladies.

Tailored Suits MADE SPECIALLY TO ORDER AT 12½ guineas each

Signs are not wanting that the fashion for tailor made garments of every description is likely to be revived during the coming season. We welcome the advent of this fashion, as tailor made garments are essentially English in character, becoming to the English figure and appropriate for the English climate. The new Tailor makes differ in many respects from those of former years. The hard lines have disappeared, and in place of the stiffer materials, soft, closely woven repps, etc., are now being used. In short, the new tailor makes are most becoming, and at the same time practical and serviceable.

In order to meet the anticipated demand for Tailored Suits we have designed a number of models which can be copied and made to order by our men tailors on the premises for the exceptionally moderate price of 12½ guineas each. Patterns and self measurement form will be sent upon request to those ladies unable to visit our establishment personally.

TAILOR SUIT (as sketch) with plain, well-tailored coat having belted fronts, plain back, and novelty cordings at pockets and cuffs, skirt made either plain at waist or with cami-top of silk to match coat lining, and finished with pockets and tucks at side. Made to order in fine quality covert coatings, gabardines, and repps for 12½ guineas.

Mazda lighting facilitates the preparation of meals—

Good Light the finishing touch

—makes the service smoother and quicker—

—and stimulates and brightens conversation.

TOO often a perfectly served meal in a perfect setting is spoiled by poor light.
Yet good light costs no more. All you have to do in order to get the best light from the current you pay for is to fit the right Mazda Lamp in every holder.

The soft, evenly diffused light of properly shaded Mazda Lamps increases the comfortable and appetising impression made by the table, the snow-white napery, and the glistening silver.

For your own convenience, and for the comfort of your guests, always specify—

Mazda—the new glareless lamp.
